

Fresh Alert
July 10, 2008 - Jalapenos

Hi, I'm Jim Naylor with another produce FreshAlert...for FreshPoint. The FDA has now implicated fresh jalapeno and Serrano chile peppers in the recent outbreak of salmonella infections that originally implicated Tomatoes. The FDA and the Centers for Disease Control are still investigating the source of this outbreak. The FDA has warned consumers not to eat raw Jalapeno or Serrano Chile Peppers. Because of the FDA warning, FreshPoint will immediately stop shipments of all RAW Jalapeno and Serrano Chile Peppers until further notice. Bell Peppers and other chile pepper varieties could be an alternative. For more information, you can go to FDA.gov. Your FreshPoint salesperson will keep you up-to-date on as we learn more from the FDA.
